Excerpt: . having only-one Edinburgh objection more to notice, (though if I. knew of any better arguments to the same purport, I should hold their production indispensable In noticing this, shall be led to a consideration equally important with the preceding.--The committee of . association, as we have seen, propose to put respectable schools of physic on the same footing with universities, as to the qualifying effect of residence. The senate, and you cannot. be surprised at it, take fire at the proposal. To admit certificates from schools of physio may, they object, prevent the possibility of ascertaining a regular education; schools may be self-erected and subject to no controul. The omission of a word in this objection does, to be sure, make some little change in the sense. Respected schools are specified. The senate in on arguing as if it had stood any schools Whatever. The. paper, indeed, wanders away too far into minutiae of regulation, which are not yet before the public, and do not belong to the discussion. of the principle. The provisions might have been exposed to just censure. Respectable schools are not easily distinguishable in terms from the reverse, though they will distinguish themselves, and none others be frequented, .unless they have the power of conferring degrees. But to oppose conferring equality of right upon schools, which have dis-fying-for practice, would not sound quite so liberal as the conditional offer to surrender a lucrative privilege....
